ABSTRACT

This directory of Oregon libraries lists public libraries, college and university libraries, and special libraries in an alphabetical order. Each listing includes a telephone number, an address, and the librarian responsible. It also lists Oregon communities and their populations which are served by the libraries. Statistical data are presented in terms of library collections, library circulation, financial support, taxable property values, expenditures, and other categories. Personnel data are given about librarians, trustees of public libraries, Oregon State Advisory Council on Libraries, and Oregon Library Association Executive Board. (CH)

PREFACE

The State Library is able to report in the 1973 Directory of Oregon Libraries complete statistics provided by 181 of Oregon's 182 public libraries. The report from one small city library was not received.

The 1973 statistics reflect a statewide increase in expenditures by public libraries of 6%, compared to an .8% gain in 1972 over 1971. This was a noticeable jump but still did not equal the 10% gain of 1971 over 1970.

This year Josephine County had the highest circulation per capita, 12.1, with Baker County a close second at 11.5. Highest expenditure per capita, $5.26, occurred in Baker County and next highest, $5.08, in Jackson County. Expenditure per capita in the area of Oregon receiving public library service remained the same, at $3.94 compared to $3.95 in 1972, and for the entire state per capita expenditure stayed at $3.16 compared with $3.17 the previous year. These figures were computed using the 1972 Center for Population Research and Census figures due to a delay in publication of the 1973 population figures.

Circulation statewide decreased by 2% compared to a 4% decrease in 1972 over 1971. Circulation per capita decreased from 6.0 in 1972 to 5.9 in the area served by public libraries and remained the same, 4.8, statewide. A circulation gain for 1973 was reported by 22 counties compared to 14 in 1972.

Bookmobile and station circulation for each county are included in the figure designated "Extension Service" under each county, pp. 12-21.

Based on 1972 population figures, Oregon's population without local public library service was 20%, representing 432,235 people. Library systems provided service to 75% of the area served by public libraries.

Emergency Employment Act funds received by three and Revenue Sharing funds received by 13 public libraries have been footnoted in the statistics. It is interesting that total public support, including city, county, and other funds, received by Oregon public libraries gained 6% in 1973 over 1972 compared to a 7% gain in 1972 over 1971. Fiscal 1973 was the first year for inclusion of Revenue Sharing funds and was also the first year that the grants-in-aid to public libraries under Title I, Library Services and Construction Act, were eliminated.

Again the State Library wishes to thank Oregon librarians, trustees, and public officials for their assistance and cooperation in gathering the necessary data for the 1973 Directory of Oregon Libraries.
